

Write Through Death A Writing Workshop

Dealing with death is a universal experience.

Sooner or later we all must process the deaths of our parents, our loved ones, and ourselves. We also face death disguised as life changes -- divorce, shifting friendships, moving, career changes, and so much more.

Many of us struggle through important and necessary conversations -- both internally and with others -- in our quest for clarity that leads to action. Writing is a cathartic tool anyone can use for help wading these waters.

This 5 week writing workshop uses writing as an examination and creativity tool. We will also explore proven conversation systems and tools to hold challenging conversations. Together, we will write and share together to examine, clarify, plan, and take action as we Write Through Death.

"Words are a lens to focus one's mind."
— Ayn Rand

All are welcome! This is a workshop for the masses, not just polished writers. We all experience life as a story, and anyone can write about it.

-Shelly Sweeney, Facilitator

What: Writing Workshop,
Facilitated by Shelly Sweeney

When: Wednesday Nights,
April 6-May 5, 2016

Where: 5326 NE Glisan Portland, OR 97213

Time: 7-8:30 PM

Other: $50 per participant,
Limited to 10 Participants

Sign Up: shellysweeney.com or email info@shellysweeney.com